Dean Inge said religion is what an individual does with their solitude. Jean-Paul Sartre notoriously said: hell is other people. For us the key relationship is not I-Thou, but We-Thou. Vayakhel is thus no ordinary episode in the history of Israel.

The Spirit of Community - Rabbi Sacks

That is why when the great Rabbi Hillel was asked by a pagan to summarize all of Judaism "while standing on one leg, he responded: I am a Jew and love my Rabbi, and I love my God. I am not sure what the rest of you are to do." (Babylonian Talmud, Shabbat 31a). ... Paul articulated this view in the New Testament: If good deeds could lead to salvation, "If a righteous person goes by a way of life that is not the way of life of the righteous, he is not saved by it, and a wicked person goes by the way of life of the righteous, he is not lost by it." (Col 13:4-12).
